

World Accidentally Misplaces Malaysia, Cannot Find It Anywhere

General area that once included the nation known as Malaysia.

The grueling international search for Malaysian Airline Flight 370 has apparently garnered so much attention from the world that nobody can find Malaysia anymore. The Southeast Asian country, previously known to occupy 329,847 square kilometers of the earth's surface, is completely lost and unaccounted for. A search and rescue team has been dispatched in an effort to locate evidence of Kuala Lumpur, Putrajaya, or even Mount Kinabalu, or any debris which might help piece together the peculiar events leading to the nation's disappearance.

"We are getting a lot of shit about this slip-up," explained Ishak Teuku, the officer leading the search efforts. "People can't seem to understand how we lost a country. They keep asking these pestering questions, like, 'What, did it just disappear off the GPS?' or 'Have you checked next to Thailand or Indonesia, where it used to be?' or 'What about our loved ones?' Frankly, as a professional, these sorts of questions offend me. Obviously, we have scoured the South China Sea, we have ransacked lost-and-found's across the globe, we have scrutinized Google Earth images... And at the end of the day, Malaysia is gone. It's just not there."

Conspiracy theories attempting to explain what could have possibly happened to Malaysia have started to circulate. While some people have attributed the disappearance to consumption by ravenous squid living in the waters along Malaysia's coast, others believe it probably has to do with Mila Kunis and Ashton Kutcher's impending nuptials and baby on the way. One online blog suggests the possibility that all of Malaysia is stuffed inside the cabin of Flight 370, while a popular post on Reddit explains that traditional Malaysian weavers must have finally replicated Harry's invisibility cloak, under which the nation is currently seeking refuge.

The number of searches for Malaysia are increasing without bound. Considering that ten percent of the population cannot even find their keys right now and also that only one in eighteen American eighth graders actually ever knew where Malaysia was in the first place, prospects for recovering the nation are bleak.

Earth Day 2014 Not Such a Big Deal on Mars

The annual celebration of Earth's greatness is shaping up to not be such a big deal on Mars this year. Although Earthlings will likely celebrate the April 22nd holiday by planting trees, being outdoors, and reveling in the glory of the third planet from the Sun, Earth Day celebrations are expected to be fairly lackluster on our neighboring planet, Mars.

Earth Day enthusiasts attribute the poor reception of the holiday on Mars to jealousy of our planet's liquid water content and biodiversity, not to mention Earth's intelligent and sexy life forms. Consequently, humans looking for a good time on Earth Day are advised to stay within the planet's borders, with the rowdiest celebrations likely taking place in highly populated urban areas and biodiverse rainforests.

Crimea Crisis to be Resolved by Turning Ukraine off, then on Again

Diplomats from around the globe had a breakthrough last week during talks concerning the crisis in Crimea when they realized that the tensions could be resolved if they simply tried turning Ukraine off, then on again.

After the Lithuanian president suggested a treaty which would simultaneously ensure Ukraine's sovereignty and earn him a back massage from German Chancellor Angela Merkel, a visibly peeved Merkel slammed her fist into her MacBook Pro. The violent gesture reportedly caused the laptop to malfunction, prompting suggestions from around the room that she ought to try turning it off, and then back on again.

"At that moment, we knew we had something big. All we had to do was try turning Crimea off, wait for at least ten seconds, and then turn it back on again. It usually works for MacBooks and other misbehaving electronic devices, so why not Crimea too? Problem solved. I can't believe we didn't think of it sooner! The solution to end the fighting and the sieges and the deeply entrenched power struggles between Putin and The West was right in front of us the entire time," explained Merkel.

"Politics can be complex," explained NATO's supreme allied commander, Samuel de P  p  . "Sometimes the situation warrants trade embargos, or the internment of minorities, or even the detonation of atomic bombs. And other times, as a servant of peace, you have to be astute enough to ask yourself, 'why don't we just try turning it off, and then back on again?'"

The diplomats had been locked in a room discussing conflict resolution proposals for five days straight before arriving at the practical idea to power down and reboot Ukraine.

"I mean, will it work? Granted, the logistics of rebooting a nation of 44 million people may be tricky to hammer out, but I think it's certainly worth a try. It won't hurt anything. Plus, we have our defense strategists figuring out the kinks now. I'll just be glad to have this squared away and behind us," de P  p   said.

As of press time, the diplomats were all pretty pleased with their brilliance, and the Crimean parliament was still joining Russian forces.

Really High Easter Bunny Cannot Remember Where He Hid the Eggs

The Easter Bunny is finding himself blazed and confused this 4/20 since he just cannot keep track of the eggs he is hiding for the Easter egg hunt. This April, the holiest day in cannabis culture coincides with the bunny's biggest day of the year as Chief Egg Hider. The commemoration of Jesus' resurrection has not fallen on 4/20 since he was hired for the position, and we met up with the Easter Bunny to discuss the challenge.

"I just cannot find those damn Easter nugs. I mean eggs! Shit. Are my eyes red? If they are -- it's because I'm a bunny! Hahaha, just kidding. Bunnies don't have red eyes. Or... do they? Everything's relative man. And I'm just a red-eyed bunny... Hey, have you seen any Easter eggs lately? I think I lost them," the bunny rambled as he scratched his furry head.

"Am I acting weird to you? It's because... I'm stoned! Ahhhh, haha HA, HahhhaAA. Man. Easter, shit. I need to sit down. NOPE! Not sitting down. I'm hopping. Hop, hop, hop.

Wow. You're pretty. OH MY GOD WE HAVE TO WATCH ICE AGE RIGHT NOW! Merrr, blah, zzzz, AFICIONADO! I meant abracadabra. Goddammit."

The bunny promptly sat down on the grass and started picking at the weeds.

"Wait a second. I just remembered that I can't find the STUPID eggs. Actually, I could go for an egg right now. One with a nice and runny yolk. Mhm. Oh, if only I could find... what was I looking for... my hat? No I don't wear a hat. Hashtag bunny ear problems! Hahaha. Were we about to go to get Taco Bell? Or am I making that up? OHHH SWEET BABY JESU----... I just found an egg in my pocket!"

The Easter bunny proceeded to pull a very yolk-y hand from his pocket as he had accidentally sat on the egg, which he explained by claiming that he did not remember placing there.

University Will Offer Degrees in Astrology, Homeopathy, and Sociology

After a nearly 25 year hiatus, Washington University has officially announced the reinstatement of the department of Sociology. In recent years, the University has expressed that a variety of important disciplines have been absent from the Wash U curriculum, and so in addition to a Sociology department, which will offer course titles ranging from the The Sociology of Crêpe Culture to The Social Origins and Implications of Zoophilia, the University will be reinstating departments of Astrology and Homeopathy as well.

"Washington University is excited about the addition of these new areas of study," explained Dean Simons. "Today, we recognize Sociology, Astrology, and Homeopathy as three important modern sciences which are sorely missing from many a liberal arts education, and we believe the integration of such critical areas of study represents great progress in our academic community."

The instruction of Astrology at Wash U was discontinued in 1930 after the discovery of Pluto created a schism amongst the professors too divisive to be reconciled.

"In one class, students would learn that a conjunction of Pluto and Jupiter in Libra would mean that Scorpios would have success in the near future, while in the next room over, a class would be taught that same arrangement spelled certain doom for all water signs," Professor

Anne Layborn explained, "It was a mess. Many didn't think Pluto belonged at all. The demotion of Pluto to a celestial dwarf in 2006 reconciled the long-divided field. It proved that, once again, Astrology was right and mainstream science was wrong."

Introducing the Homeopathy Department has also presented unique challenges, including stark opposition from the Biology Department who believes the move to implement homeopathy courses is an insult to both science and common sense. Additionally, certain professors of homeopathy have expressed concern that the campus-wide ban on water bottles will make it difficult to concoct and distribute certain homeopathic antidotes and dilutions.

The disbanding of the Sociology Department in 1991 due to experimental procedures that included stalking gay men and publishing information about them without their consent ("The Tearoom Study") is proof that WUSTL had not yet embraced the new, post-modern science on which these new departments will be founded. For a long time, the administration has clung to the notion that science required control groups and the scientific method. Today, the University is open to accepting new scientific tenets in which conclusions are drawn from narrow, immorally achieved data and feelings. Overall, the University is optimistic for the future of these three new departments.

Sex Creates Unrealistic Expectations of Porn, Study Suggests

A recent study out of Washington University claims that people's experiences having real live sex can give them unrealistic expectations of porn.

"A lot of the time, when people have sex, it can be awkward and uncomfortable," said researcher and Brazzers premium subscriber Dr. Weinsoff. "Exchanging bodily fluids and aggressively rubbing genitals sounds like a great way to spend 15 minutes at first, but in practice it often turns out to be an incredibly unsatisfying encounter. Our research shows that this can have a negative effect on people's porn viewing habits."

"83 percent of sexually active adults surveyed told us that their experiences led them to believe that watching porn would be an uncomfortable and disappointing experience, rather than the transcendent, beautifully sensual media that it is."

The study reports a wide range of misconceptions about porn among people who have had sexual encounters in the past. These beliefs, which the report suggests are direct results of sexual experiences, include assertions that female porn actors never reach climax, that watching porn may cause pregnancy, and that watching may cause lifetime feelings of crushing regret and inadequacy.

At press time, Washington University scientists were working on a new study on whether it is possible to do research while having a massive erection.

Point

"Day-uuum, this hook-up is hawt."

by Sam Carpenter, Beer Enthusiast

Just look at me go... I am hooking-up with this girl right now! Like, really hooking-up. It's going well. She keeps squirming around, so I can tell she's into it. I asked if she wanted a glass of water, and she said "NO" so vehemently that I knew she could not wait to get into bed with me. And then I asked if she wanted a coffee or a diet coke, and she slapped me right across the face! Kinky shit. I was like "damn, you don't want these caffeinated beverages because you want me, I see what you're doing." She kept jiggling her legs, but whatever, I think this is going well.

Counter-Point

"I HAVE TO PEE SO BAD!!!!!"

by Jenny Walker, very hydrated

Ughhhhh, what is happening, you're really hot, but I have to pee SO BAD!!!! I've had to pee for hours after all those amaretto sours... and then you bought me that Bud Light, so this is partially your fault! I didn't even enjoy that grody beer. My need to urinate is so powerful that I just can't even focus on hooking up with you right now. My bladder is the only thing that is pulsating. I thought I could use your bathroom, but I can't find it! And things keep getting hot and heavy in here. A minute ago I thought I was going to pee my pants, but then you took them off. But I STILL NEED TO PEE!!!! I can't focus at all. You know what, fuck it, I'm just going to pee in your bed. Wow, yeah, that's better. Where were we?

Eagles Use Jewish Geography To Link DeSean Jackson To Gang Violence

Last week, the Philadelphia Eagles released all-pro wide receiver DeSean Jackson due to reported affiliations with gangsters in Los Angeles which came to light thanks to a sophisticated web of Jewish-geography.

"It really is a small world," said Eagles' CEO Jeffrey Lurie. "While DeSean might deny these links, the credibility of the Jewish-geography we have used to make these connections is rock solid."

The Eagles report that world-renowned yenta, Joyce Garbovitz, was instrumental in helping connect the dots between Jackson and top gang members. Without her keen perceptiveness and countless Jewish acquaintances, the Eagles believe they would still be in the dark about DeSean's connections.

"Ya see, my lovely hairdresser cuts for the neighbor of the ex-wife of the owner of Mikey's Bagels, which DeSean comes to every Sunday," Garbovitz explained. "She tells me that apparently, DeSean always comes in at seven to pick up six dozen bagels, various shmears, and a pound of lox, like he's going to sit Shiva or something -- Nobody that young goes to that many Shivas, so I knew something fishy was going on."

Garbovitz also explained how her dermatologist, Ethel Klein, also worked for the Eagles. Klein reported marks on DeSean's arms that could have only resulted from being a professional football player or serious, gang-related drug use.

Despite the damning evidence, Jackson has succeeded in landing a spot on the Washington Redskins thanks to a connection he made at his third cousin's wedding--it turns out Redskins owner Dan Snyder's kids actually went to the same summer camp as Jackson.

"We're very excited to have DeSean as a member of this organization. He's got really good hands, for a shvartze" said Snyder, owner of a football team named after a racial slur. "I'm excited for him to be catching by balls, but I'll never let him near my daughter."

WUnderground's Game of Thrones Review

Game of Thrones Season 4 premieres this April. Here's what we thought:

WHAT WE LIKED

- Something interesting finally happens with the cripple's Bran's storyline.
- All characters now wear name-tags.
- This season puts a spotlight on eating healthy!
- Theon's detached genitals finally find a romantic interest (but we won't say who!)
- Merpeople are introduced to the story. Specifically, the show does a great job of showing how the merpeople are strong contenders for the Iron Throne despite not being able to walk.
- A strong male character puts Daenerys in her place.
- Tyrion now puts on sunglasses whenever he makes a joke.
- Getting to lord these details over all our friends.

WHAT WE DIDN'T LIKE

- The interesting thing that happens with Gimpy Bran's storyline is that he has sex with his wolf.
- HBO tried to up the nudity without watering down the storyline by surgically adding a second pair of breasts to most of the actresses. But with the exception of Arya, it doesn't really work.

"I'll bash ur fookin 'ead in, i swear on me mum/ aunt"

- The shadow-vagina-baby musical number.
- Three major characters get herpes and that's all they talk about for the entire season.
- Joffrey has his first nude scene, and he is disappointingly well-endowed.
- The rest of the Starks die due to various congenital disorders rather than betrayals.
- The book was better.
