

WUnderground

Is that an erection in your pants or are you just happy to see me?

VOLUME 11, ISSUE 6

APRIL 9, 2015

PRICE: Goat's Milk Fresh Out the Udder

Researchers Publish Ground-Breaking Report: Harry's Is No Longer Move

Our worst fear — which many fringe scientists and sociologists have been warning us about for the past decade — seems to have actually taken place over the course of this past year. According to the bi-annual Undergraduate Demographics and Dogmatic-Ethnopoetics Report, the once famed Harry's Restaurant and Bar is no longer "the Move."

Goodnight sweet prince

Dr. Susan Hymes of the anthropology department commented "we are currently experiencing a paradigm shift of an unprecedented scale. Harry's has been the Move for Washington University students since as far back as our records go." Hymes reported that the first records of drinking at Harry's reach all the way back to '97, and other than a brief dark age from '03 to '05 when all the department's documents were destroyed in a mysterious fire, it's been documented as a second home for students ever since. "We in the department have no way of knowing how this pillar of community being overturned will affect us going forward," Dr. Hymes admitted, "we've reached the limits of human knowledge in the field."

According to the UDD-ER, surveyed students cited many reasons for the beloved Bar's fall from grace. The most common response was "huge crowds and overpriced drinks are no longer endearing," closely followed by "smells bad" and "penis" although that last result was top ranked in all of the survey questions so its verisimilitude is questionable. Another method the UDD-ER used to evaluate the bar's Move-oscity were verbal exit surveys. While previous years have always had the mean rating be somewhere between "a'ight" and "chill," the current reviews place it well below a high-pitched "ehh" and dangerously close to "not that tight." This drop puts it below acceptable Move-levels — another sign that the reign has come to an end.

Sophomore Mike Palmer was less surprised by the announcement than the professionals. "Harry's used to be dope, but then I realized that literally any other bar exists," Palmer confided to our interviewer. "I haven't been back since."

While many members of the WashU community have taken time off to mourn the passing of Harry's Move status, there's been no rest for the anthropology department. Ever since the news broke, the department has been frantically trying to pinpoint the new venue that will fill the vacuum left by the fallen giant. Early signs have pointed to various "mini-Moves" that have sprouted up around certain establishments that are all vying for dominance. Which one will win out in the end is still unclear, but at press time the department is reporting that Kings, the bar in the Knight's Center, and Shepley 4 are the current front-runners.

Sophomore Notices Urge to Make Puns, Grill Outside—Fears Impending Fatherhood

He hasn't moved in days

Due to a recent spike in fatherly-tendencies Sophomore Rudy Clements has begun fearing the impending birth of his child. Although Clements has not recently (or ever) had unprotected (or protected) sex, his newfound love of transition lenses has led him to believe that fatherhood is right around the corner.

As of last Friday night when his friends asked if he wanted to "hit the bars" and he reportedly responded "That sounds like it would sure hurt! Hahahha! Ehhhh? Boys?" As his pun was met by silence, Clements realized that something was terribly wrong.

Close friends also started to take note of his unusually anachronistic behavior after seeing Clements hit up Harry's in a loose-fitting pair of jeans and an Aerosmith t-shirt last Thursday. This tipped them off to all sorts of strange changes taking place. "Yeah, I walked in on Rudy when he was passed out yesterday and I thought he'd

Continued on page 4

Buried WUnderground

KWUR Decides Radio Broadcast Is Too Main-stream and Accessible, Reverts to Mailing 8-Tracks, Hiring Traveling Bards

page 0

Freshman Gets Over 1200 Yakarma, Updates Resume

page 7b

Breaking Report: Mipsy the Rabbit was Not Sent to a Farm, and Fish Don't Just Change Colors After You've been on Vacation

page 1.618...

Matzos, the Salvia of Breads

page 7:59 AM

Local Man Complains His Daiquri Is Too Girly Due to Miniature Umbrella

page five

Vegetarian Pre-med Not Sure Which to Shoehorn into Conversation at Parties

page (t)0(t)s

Graduating Senior Celebrates Being Basically Done with Only Two Papers, Three Quizzes, and a Couple Homework Assignments Before Having Finals

page 4
(haha not really)

Exposé: The Making of a StudLife Article

The most efficient distribution of StudLife yet!

StudLife is one of our campus' most well-stocked newspapers and is the oldest independent student-run publication west of the Mississippi (not including California). But what exactly goes into crafting each of the spectacular articles? StudLife's publication process has always been hidden behind closed doors — until now, that is. We had one of our members go undercover to find out what makes each StudLife article so special, how they are made, and where they all come from. He followed the creation of one specific article "Why Aren't Our Athletic Teams More Black?" by Daphne Kristianson to illustrate the process. This is what he found.

How a StudLife writer crafts an article:

The Premise — At the center of every article, there's an idea. Its important that a writer feels deeply invested in their idea, which is why so many of them are directly invented by the writers rather than taken from actual events. Look for details around campus, no matter how small or not-actually-existent, to be misconstrued to ground your idea. Always remember the StudLife motto: "it's better to write about an issue you are heavily invested in and have preconceptions towards than one where you are impartial and unbiased!" The idea for "Why Aren't Our Athletic Teams More Black?" came from Kristianson seeing three white joggers and zero black joggers on the track while she walked to her first class one morning.

The Research — At this point, the vast majority of the content of the article is set. However, there's always a few doubting Thomases that won't believe everything they read without some bits of evidence sprinkled throughout. This is where research comes in. StudLife writers comb the internet, doing almost a half-dozen different Google searches to look for Huffington Post articles to take statistics from. Quotes from students are also an important part of many articles which are often paraphrased from comments on controversial posts on YikYak. For example, in Kristianson's article she created the quote "as a young black student here, the exclusion of black athletes from all manner of sporting competitions is both insulting and unacceptable," attributed to "Samantha Hawthorne," as a paraphrasing of the Yak "s/o to that cute blond guy on the basketball team" posted under the handle "yo hmu."

The Writing — Now that all the ingredients are together, it's time to assemble the article. The important thing to remember is that people don't read a newspaper for virtuosic writing or an absence of spelling errors — they read it because it grabbed their attention with an inflammatory title and keep reading because each line is more infuriatingly close-minded and objectively incorrect than the last. You may notice that the title "Why Aren't Our Athletic Teams More Black?" is awkwardly worded, arguably grammatically incorrect (blacker?), and borderline racist. This is perfect. A well-worded, inoffensive title will go in one metaphorical ear and out the other, while an incendiary title will get stuck in your consciousness like a fishbone caught in your throat.

The Editing — Hahahahahahahaha

And there you have it. This is the exclusive look into our wonderful paper's weekly creation. Hopefully this insight will let you appreciate how much work goes into each article.

Record Number of Freshmen Continue to Mistake Uncle Joe's as a Sex Hotline

Last Tuesday, Uncle Joe's released a PSA on their Facebook page with the message "dear freshmen, we are a peer counseling organization that provides first-line support and resources for students in need. We are not a daddy-issue themed sex hotline. Please stop calling." After seeing this, we contacted the organization to find out more about this apparent problem.

"At the beginning of every year, there's always a few confused souls," Joe's member Rasida Evans confided, "usually we gently mention that this isn't a 1-900 number and they politely back off. However, this year it's been different. This year we've been plagued by an unusually large and obstinate class that can't take a hint."

According to Rasida, every Friday and Saturday night, the Joe's call center is flooded with calls almost exclusively by students trying to get off with the help of Big Joe. It's hard to screen these calls from the calls of people actually looking for counseling, since both conversations start similarly enough with lines like "help me, I've got a problem," or "I've been feeling homesick recently." Because of this, Joe's members are forced to spend valuable minutes humoring these students' twisted Electra complexes, not sure if "do you mind if I call you daddy" is a valuable way to work through tough feelings of inadequacy, or just a sex fantasy for a hormonal teen while he frantically flails the whale.

"We've never had to do this before, but unfortunately we needed to ban a few students' phone numbers from our program. This normally would be against our

The other Uncle Joe is not happy about the confusion either

policies in case they ever needed help, but we just couldn't take the volume

Continued on page 4

WUnderground

WUnderground is WashU's premier [only] satirical newspaper and should be taken about as seriously as that chick who you're kind of into poking you on Facebook. However, the news reported by this paper is completely fictitious, at least to our knowledge. Any resemblance to persons living, ailing or dead is entirely intentional.

Chiefs of Staff

Nate Blecher
President

Sam Blumkin
Editor in Chief

Mac Slone
Editor in Chief

Foreign Correspondent

Andrew Miller

Staff

Callan Coghlan

Aaron Dozzi

Anat Gross

Clay Klein

Justin Kroll

Josh Moskow

Simon Olson

Lauren Paley

Blake Robertson

Kimball Slade

Jordan Siff

Patricia Witt

We are always recruiting new members. If you would like to write, edit, doodle, spellcheck, or post our nudes to the internet, email us at: wunderground@su.wustl.edu, like us on Facebook, and follow us on Twitter (@_WUnderground)

ISSN # 1938-0089

wunderground.wustl.edu

Missed Connections - Wash U

BD Line (into my heart) - w4m

You were standing in line for a the grill. I was behind you... but i wish i were beneath you. You were the short-haired blonde who ordered a turkey burger. Message me my eye color and the song i was humming so i know its you.

We barely met - m4w

We only met in passing, but we locked eyes for a moment and it was the most sensual, fulfilling experience of my life. I don't remember much about that brief, wonderful experience, but I think you were brunette, 5'4", from Topeka, Kansas, live in Lee 302, SSN 129-987-5834. Send me your exact hourly schedule. I'll know.

Bio 2960 - w4w

You were in our crowded bio lecture. Brunette, vaguely jewish, had a longchamp bag, toms, and a floral dress. I mostly just saw the back of your head, but it was love at first sight. Message me one discerning feature. Like any one. I'm sure I'll know it when I hear it.

Older gentleman - w4m

You were stiffly walking across campus with a sexy, plastered on expression. You were beautifully, absently nodding to everything your conversation partners were saying. Your wavy, grey comb-over perfectly matched your three-piece suit. Maybe we can Lead Together sometime ;). Message me how much you plan to hike my tuition.

Whispers/ Shouting

Sitting, studying. Pensive, eating. Noise, so much noise, but whispers all around and no where. Your table was round, but your aura -- infinite. Mac light glowing, study time flowing. Flowing away like people never met. Tell me the color of my top-knot band.

Growing Love - m4t

My love for you was seeded only a couple decades ago, but it has since grown large and strong and well-shaded. When I feel your rough embrace, I just want to climb all over you. I think its time we bore the fruit of or relationship. If you agree meet me where we always do.

HOROSCOPES

Aries
(March 21 - April 19)
You will meet someone at the bunny that you won't recognize at first. Go with him. Follow him into his van. This will be the first day of the rest of your life.

Libra
(September 23 - October 22)
You know how they say there are two types of people in the world? Well I say there's only ONE type of you: you.

Taurus
(April 20 - May 20)
Set a notification in your phone for May 3rd at 4:17 AM. I won't ruin the surprise, but you'll thank me later.

Scorpio
(October 23 - November 22)
Your lucky numbers are 5, 7, 19, 29, 47, PowerBall: 3. Use these in the Missouri lottery. You'll win for sure, I promise.

Gemini
(May 21 - June 21)
Watch out for what your roommate, Paul Hurwitz, leaves in the fridge this week. I think he put in some spoiled milk as a passive aggressive way to tell you to stop eating his food.

Sagittarius
(November 23 - December 21)
;

Cancer
(June 22 - July 23)
You will feel something at some point that you have often felt in the past, like sadness or your cat.

Capricorn
(December 20 - January 19)
Drop pre-med, it's only making you unhappy. Pick up that poetry major instead. I know your parents want you to be a doctor but fuck them, follow your dreams. You deserve it.

Leo
(July 24 - August 23)
Dude, what if, like, one of the Mars rovers landed on another Mars rover and they both broke. That would suck.

Aquarius
(January 21 - February 19)
Believe it or not, there are actually no Aquarii at WashU. I know, who would have thought?

Virgo
(August 24 - September 22)
Hehehe, your sign sounds like virgin. Why don't you try getting laid, loser? Oh wait, I don't see that in your future any time soon. Burn!

Pisces
(February 20 - March 20)
You know that flicker you see in your peripheral vision every time you enter your apartment? That will cease exactly 6 days after reading this. However, this will only serve to make you more uneasy in your own home. Good luck.

Party Mistake - m4w

I met you at a party last night. We bumped into each other. And then again, and again. Somehow we kept getting separated. It wasn't that crowded, but I guess you got swept away (like you swept me off my feet) cause everytime I looked away you were gone like a passing sunset/rainbow combo. When we finally got to exchange numbers, you miswrote yours. Let's fix that mistake and make some new ones.

Point

The Apple Watch will fundamentally change the way humans interact with technology

By: Chandler Michens

Casual Apple Enthusiast, Steve Jobs Dakimakura Owner

I think its pretty fair to say Apple has ushered in most, if not all, major technological advances of the past 50 years. I know what you're thinking: "But Chandler, Apple was founded only 39 years ago on April 1, 1976 in Cupertino, California". Well, I would like to inform you that Steve Job, rest his beautiful intellect, was laying the foundations for change decades before Apple was incorporated!

Then you're all like, "But Chandler, Steve Jobs was only 21 when he helped found Apple. How was he effecting the landscape of computer interface in his toddler and teen years?" Shut the fuck up!! Steve Jobs is a god and in his spirit I am guided! I'm buying whatever the hell they're coming out with, and its going to be the most revolutionary, retroactively invalidating thing ever!

Counter-Point

Why is this guy so obsessed with Apple watch?

By: Amanda Taylor

Skeptic Spectator, Free Thinker

Oh my god, this guy across the room has been researching the Apple watch for like 4 hours now. He's such a freak. I counted every style he looked at and how many times he looked at them, and let's just say it was off-putting. After compiling his stats into an Excel sheet, I found he spent an average of 4 minutes and 34 seconds on each style, but with a standard deviation of OVER 2 MINUTES. How about some consistency, ya weirdo! I don't even get why this dude is so wet over the Apple watch. It's like a tiny phone that you wear on your wrist? Except it needs an iPhone to function. Or is it supposed to replace your phone? After, researching the prevailing options and cross-referencing different fact-checking sites, I don't get why anyone who isn't a complete freak would be so obsessed about the damn thing.

Uncle Joe's Sex Hotline Continued

or rapid frequency, so to speak," Joe's spokesman Arnold Simone admitted.

We managed to track down one repeat offender, Tim Fulton, for an interview due to the fact that he replied to almost every Uncle Joe's Facebook post attempting to talk dirty to the anonymous member that maintains the page. "Oh man, Uncle Joe's is my go-to hotline," Fulton was happy to share with our interviewer, "I love how they start off all slow and concerned and then get angry with you — just like my uncle used to! They have such dedication to the role too. They keep in character so much that they've blocked my number. Now I have to call in from one of those weird communal phones in Whispers like the dirty little boy that I am. How did they even know I also have public indecency fetish?"

We asked Rasida what Joe's planned to do about the issue. "I just hope the class next year isn't the same way," Evans responded with a despondent sigh, "although judging by the huge spike in traffic we got during scholarship weekend, I'm not holding my breath."

At press-time, it seems that deluge of horny callers has finally let up some for the poor organization ever since many of the freshmen caught wind of a new fetish-themed sex line: S.A.R.A.H.

Sophomore Fears Fatherhood Cont.

just like, y'know, had too many shots and — whatever. But then I noticed his computer was on and he had like, 50 searches going...LazEboys, Sensodyne, Florida timeshares. Most surprising of all, not a single tab was devoted to porn... that's when I knew something was up," confides roommate Laurence Bleu.

In light of his seemingly immaculate conception, Clements has made quick plans to "remedy" the situation. He recently purchased 10 crates of Plan B, just to be safe, as well as an assortment of available literature from planned parenthood. He attempted to distribute these gift baskets of goodies to his former flames, along with a note that heavily implied that porn is better on VHS.

Most recently Clements was seen enjoying a Werther's Original hard candy while wearing his compression socks, pondering whether he was mistaken and he was, in fact, already a grandfather.

The Puzzler's Dilemma

Can you find all 15 words hidden in the sea of random letters? It's tough, but possible!

Word Bank:
 Supernacular
 Thalassocracy
 Ennui
 Proscenium
 Apothegm
 Chthonic
 Tmesis
 Oblivescence
 Aetiology
 Ataraxia
 Emollient
 Tatterdemalion
 Lapsarian
 Eeeeeeeee-ee
 Terraqueous

Top 10...

Top 10 Things You Totally Should Have Called

10. Your mom
9. Your elementary school guidance counselor to tell them you finally got a job and you're finally becoming something and FUCK YOU MS. NORBERRY
8. Ted Cruz coming out as an early front-runner
7. Stock market crash
6. Your friend from freshman year you ran into and totally decided to hang out with
5. The prefrosh you fucked last week
4. Fore right after you hit a golf ball
3. Ted Cruz coming out
2. That hand in strip poker that would have finally let you see boobs
1. Your sponsor

What Do You Think?

Ken Burns has been chosen as the speaker for this year's commencement. What do you think?

Thomas Simmons
Avid Ken Burns fan, junior

"Oh wow! The seniors this year are so lucky. I might stay for commencement this year just to see him. And my friends off or whatever."

George Washington
Hiding under a thin bravado of cocksuredness

"So the civil war, WWII, ol' TJ, and even those pussies in congress get their own documentaries, but not the greatest president to ever live or the war he led for our freedom? Yeah, okay."

Richard Valentino
Avid Ken Burns effect fan, senior

"What are the chances he'll let me walk towards him really slowly during the speech?"

Ken Burns
Commencement speaker, makes some movies

"I can only hope that in 100 years people will remember this panning over some archival photographs set to a soothing melody and a voice-over."

Anthony Michens
Senior, average knowledges of documentaries

"I'm excited enough that I looked him up and I'll pay attention to his speech, but not enough that I'll watch any of his movies."