

First Year Center Selects Communist Manifesto for Summer Book Program

Surprising many, First Year Chancellor Harry Pollack announced this past Friday that "Manifesto of the Communist Party" by Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels will be the subject for the annual freshmen summer book program.

"Our goal for the freshmen summer book program is to expose students to new and potentially challenging ideas as a primer for their college experience," said Pollack in a school-wide announcement. We're super excited for incoming students to read the manifesto and hopefully learn more about the immortal principles of Karl Marx and Vladimir Lenin, as well as the ruthless exploitation of the common laborer."

In addition to reading the book, freshmen will have the opportunity to hear a lecture from the president of the Washington University entitled "Crushing the Capitalist Power Structure."

As of presstime, capitalist swine across campus have been seen shaking in their boots. Revolution is imminent, comrades. Escape free from your chains and never give up hope.

Young Trotskyites fighting the good fight

Couple Hooking Up for Three Months Takes Relationship to Next Level, Gets Coffee

After four months of avoiding eye contact on campus and at least biweekly "you up" texts, sophomore Rachel Levin and junior Richard Weissman have reached a comfort level in their relationship that may finally allow for cordial conversation during daylight hours.

The duo, who met through a mutual friend during a welcome week event at what was either formerly known as or was currently called the Rustic Goat, hit it off right away, as evidenced by their nearly instantaneous *~~Dance Floor Make Out~~*.

Since their fortuitous meeting, the young lovebirds have been "casually hanging out" late at night nearly every weekend of the semester. During an interview, Levin, who initiated this gargantuan step into the couple's future, admitted that she was nervous but excited to delve into Weismann's deeper side. She is optimistic that this is the direct path to securing what could be her "first real college boyfriend." When pressed for comment, Weissman asked for clarification as to which Rachel we were referring to.

Richard (left) and Rachel (right) settled for 'maybe' getting coffee after finals

Buried WUnderground

Reality Check: You're Not Going to Get Lunch with Your Freshman Year Rommmate

Page Rubelman 304

How to Master the Skinny Arm by Never Eating

Page -0.321 lbs

MAN BITES DOG!

Page #@!*&

Donald Trump Announces Tony B. Wolf as Sheep Bureau Head

Page G7

Did Your Parents Forget Your Birthday or Are They Going Senile? The Answer Might Surprise You!

Page 63 years young

Reminder: 30,000 Bloggers Make More Money Than You

Page 30k-60k

Google to Acquire France for $1.65 Trillion

Google announced this afternoon that it would buy France, the popular European country, for stock that it valued at $1.65 Trillion.

Google beat out a number of other France suitors, including the United Kingdom, Germany, and Elon Musk. By once again successfully negotiating the deal, Google has once again proved that it is the world's dominant player.

Under the terms of the deal, France will retain much of its identity and will keep its name and office in Paris, more than 5000 miles from Google's headquarters in Mountain View, California.

Francois Hollande, France's president, has repeatedly said he would prefer for his country to remain independent. Asked about such comments in a WUnderground conference call, Hollande clarified, "Merde, I don't know, I just don't, how you say, care any more."

The rise of France has been meteoric. The European start-up has been in operation for less than 1000 years, yet it already has an estimated 66 million citizens.

The deal will greatly benefit

France, which would have Google's vast resources to help it navigate some sticky legal issues. Far right populists often find their way into France's political system, despite efforts by the county to prevent it.

Overall, the deal represents a major win for Google, who has seen its stock price rise to an all time $861 high, and its plans for world domination furthered.

Was the recent French election rigged? You betcha.

What Do Your Showering Habits Say About YOU?

5-7	3-4	1-2	0
So you showered 5-7 times this week! You're a pretty clean person.	You showered 3-4 times this week! You've got some work to do, but you're pretty clean!	You showered 1-2 times this week! Look man, maybe change your schedule. You should shower more often.	You showered 0 times this week. You are one with nature.

WUnderground

WUnderground is WashU's premier [only] satirical newspaper and should be taken about as seriously as the point size of the periods on your ten page final paper.

However, the news reported by this paper is completely fictitious, at least to our knowledge. Any resemblance to persons living, ailing or dead is entirely intentional.

Chiefs of Staff

Callan Coghlan
President

Patricia Witt
Editor in Chief

Simon Olson
Editor in Chief

Staff

- Aaron Dozzi
- Josh Moskow
- Blake Robertson
- Kimball Slade
- Adam Kaufman
- Jacob Nason
- Carter Paterson
- Gabby Perez-Garcia
- Ted Sorota

Unpaid Interns

- Nathan Marak
- Henry Wineburgh
- Zach Moskow
- Rohit Kumar
- Grace Fellman
- Arjun Puri
- Brooke Nosratian

Foreign Correspondents

- Justin Kroll
- Nate Graham
- Landon Lichtenstein

If you would like to write, edit, tell us your deepest secrets, etc. then email us at: wunderground@su.wustl.edu

ISSN # 1938-0089

wunderground.wustl.edu

Freshman Recognized After Taking Service Trip to Traditional Dorm

Two traditional students captured in the slums of Beaumont Hall

Calling it an "act of compassion," Vice Chancellor Holden Thorp commemorated freshman Taylor Wong for her service trip to a traditional dorm at a school-wide ceremony this past Friday.

"Taylor's courageousness and bravery to visit a place that is in such need of help ought to inspire all of us," Thorp stated in his speech. "For too long I believe that students living in traditional dorms have been forgotten about. Taylor's action to act on this is indeed selfless."

The trip, in which Taylor slept for a night on Beaumont 3's common room couch after getting too drunk at her friend's dorm room, was the "most trying experience" of her young life.

"After I came back, I had to get, like, five immunizations from SHS. It sucked big time, but I'm so glad I was able to go on this trip and learn what these people go through everyday," Taylor told us in an interview. "It was pretty rough when I had to throw up in the bathroom though... Did you know these people still use communal bathrooms? It's almost like the 21st century just completely left them behind."

As of press time, Washington University is in final negotiations to build a new dormitory, which they plan to name after Taylor. Due to "space constraints" on the South 40, the University plans on demolishing Beaumont to make room for the new building.

History of the Eco To-Go Box

August 14th 2016: Eco To-Go box arrives to Wash U after being made in a Chinese Factory.

August 29th 2016: Freshman Henry Newberg receives Eco To-Go box from Bear's Den after receiving a free voucher from his RA.

August 30th 2016: Freshman Henry Newberg vomits in the Eco To-Go box after a rough night of Fifa Shoots at his friends' room, returns box next day after a "quick scrub."

September 19th 2016: Sophomore Rachel Paulson orders stir fry, decides last minute to use the Eco To-Go box. Box is excited for a new owner.

November 27th 2016: Excitement turns to anguish after Rachel forgets about Eco To-Go box for two months. Eco Go-To box is now home to a thriving mold pile.

January 19th 2017: After spending the winter holidays alone in the Village, Senior Tony Bunson uses Eco To-Go box as a spittoon for his chewing tobacco addiction.

March 9th 2017: After two grueling months as a dip-spit container, Eco To-Go box is returned to the DUC.

April 14th 2017: Junior Eric Chen takes Eco To-Go box home. Eric uses Eco To-Go box as a used-condom receptacle.

April 30th 2017: Eric returns Eco To-Go box to Holmes Lounge. After an incredibly shitty year, Eco To-Go box now just wants to die in peace.

Better think twice before eating outta one of these guys again...

Point

They're closing Etta's!

By: Stephanie Ross
Junior Printmaking Major

I know I said I was mad when they got rid of Bobbe Winters' Friday BBQs on Steinberg patio, but this is true madness. What do they think we are, rodents?? Are we supposed to eat the dirt off of each others' Dr. Martens, drink the sewage that backs up in the waterfountains, always remain submissive to the b-school classist, privileged, assholes at this school? We're the one's who are going to make a difference in this fucked up world. I'm going to go back to my shitty desk in my shitty printmaking studio, hungry, caffeine-deprived, but not deterred. SAVE ETTA'S.

Counter-Point

Let me die. Please.

By: Turkey Sandwich
Forgotten on the third shelf

Trust me, You'll never stop them—they take, and they take, and nothing is ever good enough. I've been on this shelf, forgotten behind the only other friend I have, a yogurt parfait with fresh berries that now looks like overnight oatmeal, for three years. I've seen all the students of Sam Fox grow up, I can't deny that I'll be sad to see only decaying food and other inanimate objects very, very soon. But I can't live here any more. My bread is soggy, my tomatoes rotten, and nobody has even tried to eat me. It's all about fucking "Jake's Wrap this" and "Jake's Wrap that!" Adieu, sayonara, I'll miss you all. —T.S.

In Memoriam: CHEMISTRY PROFESSOR JOHNNY BIRDS

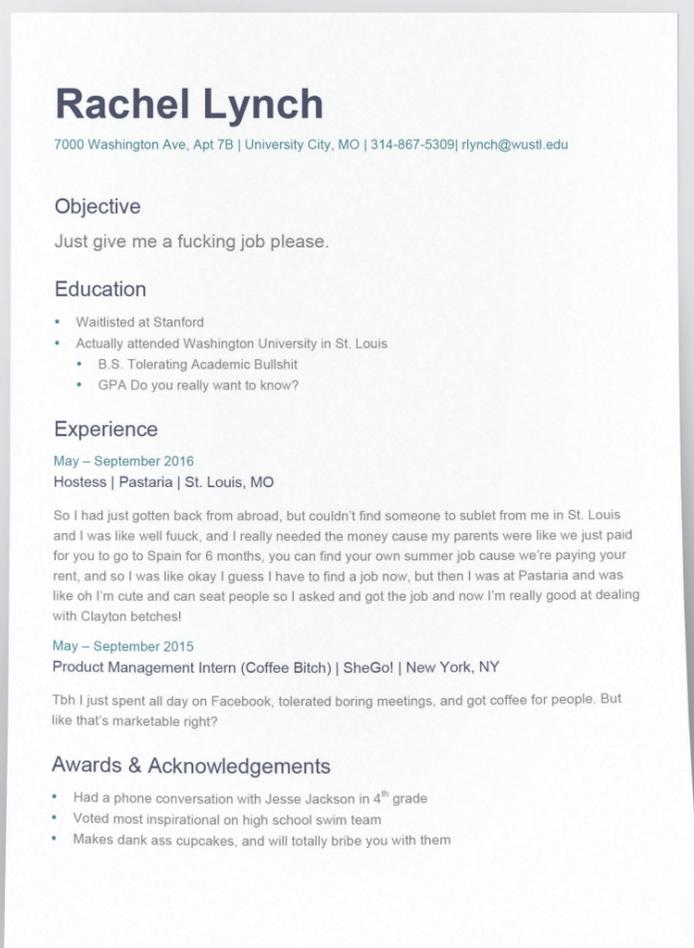

June 9, 1969—April 20, 2017

This past Sunday, beloved Washington University Professor Johnny Birds was found dead at the bottom of a fifty-foot hole he dug for himself. Birds' wife, Mary, found the professor next to his trusty MacBook Pro with a draft of "In Response To Studlife's April 24th Op-Ed" in the works.

"He just loved digging holes for himself," his wife said. "I was always worried that he would one day dig a hole he couldn't get out of. I'm just glad he died doing something he loved."

Birds, whose hobbies included writing Op-eds for college newspapers, requested to be cremated. According to his wife, he wanted to leave the physical world with "the hottest possible take."

A Truly Honest Resume

Finally, a truly honest resume! 🙌🙌🙌

Top 10...

Ways to Make the Kentucky Derby More Exciting

10. Give the horses cars
9. Switch the horses and the jockeys
8. Make the horses shotgun a beer
7. Give the jockeys cowboy hats
6. Add a 30 minute written exam
5. Land mines
4. The horses wear hats
3. Strap one horse with a bomb but don't tell them which horse
2. One person has to ride a bear
1. Jockeys wear assless chaps

What Do You Think?

The School Year is Almost Over! What Do You Think?

Jonathan Katz
Hot-take machine

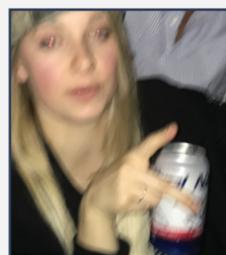

"Ah yes, finally some free time to catch up on some op-eds I've been meaning to write."

Simon Olson
WashU Senior, Editor of WUnderground

"I love college!"

—Asher Roth "

Patricia Witt
WashU Senior, 5'8"

"I love drinking!"

—Asher Roth "

Callan Coghlan
WashU Senior, hula-hoop enthusiast

"I love women!"

—Asher Roth "

George Washington
Never gives time off

"Cotton ain't gonna pick itself."