

WUnderground

You Can Call Me "Daddy"

Wake me up when September ends

VOLUME 13, ISSUE 1

SEPTEMBER 30, 2016

PRICE: Three Galleons, Two Sickles, and 1 Nutsack

EST Warns Supply of Kissies May Not be Enough to Combat South 40 Boo-Boo Outbreak

Noting a disturbing rise in the number of boo-boo diagnoses made by SHS this month, EST officials warned that the group may not have a large enough supply of kissies to treat the growing outbreak among students. While September is known as peak season for ouchies and oopsies as new freshmen adjust to their surroundings, this season's boo-boo outbreak has surpassed all official projections.

"If we run out of kissies, who will make the boo-boos all better?" said EST medic Aaron Davis. "We have a backup supply of Scooby-Doo bandages, and we're trained to administer lollypops in emergencies, but kissies are the only real way to take a real nasty boo-boo and make it all okey dokey."

Freshmen and elderly grad students are at the highest risk for developing boo-boos, but all students should be on the lookout for scrapes and bumps that can develop into more serious kissie-resistant injuries. If left untreated, officials say these ouchies can make you feel really super duper icky and can only be treated with drastic measures like forced early bedtime.

"Freshmen should take care to avoid high boo-boo risk activities like roughhousing in the common room or crossing the street without an adult," said Davis. "And absolutely no riding the Circ without a helmet."

Thank you, EST, for your constant love and support.

Unfazed by Debate Rejection, Johnson Forges Ahead in Campaign

As the University prepares itself for the upcoming presidential debate between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump, an increased sense of excitement can be felt throughout campus. Less excited, however, is Libertarian Party candidate Gary Johnson, who failed to gain the 15% support in national polls needed to be invited to the debate.

With his schedule freed up, Gary Johnson delivered a press conference last weekend detailing his plans for the rest of the campaign season. At the press conference, Johnson said he was taking his rejection "in stride."

"Yeah, I didn't see this coming, but it'll be nice to finally have a night off. [The media] has really been on my tail, so it will be great to get a little me time," Johnson told reporters while cracking open his second pint of Ben and Jerry's. "Really it's the best of both worlds: I won't be on stage making a fool of myself, and I'll be able to catch up on The Bachelor."

His campaign team is still actively preparing Johnson for upcoming debates in case he passes the 15% threshold. However, at Johnson's request, the team has abandoned practicing behind a podium and Johnson now spends "hours" debating a pretend Hillary and Trump in the shower. As of press time, his team reports Johnson holding a 10% win rate in his practice debates.

Johnson exclaimed, "If you don't appreciate 'The Tonight Dough' then you're a fucking psycho."

Buried WUnderground

Gary Johnson Denied Spots at Debate, Trick or TKE

Page Four-Three

I Lived it: I Fucked a Swamp Friend

Page A5

15 Facial Expressions to Pretend You're not Doing Kegels

Page SClub7

10 Best Local Brunch Bathrooms to Hurl in on Saturday Morning

Page 314

Blue Man Group Performance on Race in America Honestly Kind of Confusing

Page A3

We Offered 20 Premeds a Moldy Peach You Won't Believe What Happened Next

Page 4.20

Freshman Haunted by Demon Stupidly More Worried about Making Friends

Freshman Jeremy Morrison reported recently that he was feeling “very nervous,” but foolishly because he feared he “wouldn’t fit in at college,” and not because of the ancient and maleficent being Ieriub’hxal that has haunted him since a rather unfortunate visit to Madam Beelzebub’s Antique Shop and Hotdog Shack back in 2011.

“I don’t know, being on a freshman floor is just so intimidating!” said Morrison, his voice notably cracking at the thought of impressing mere mortal humans, rather than the soul crushing dread of Ieriub’hxal, an entity who’s terror stopped the hearts of Assyrian men, who lurked just feet behind Morrison, his twisted, sulfur finger carving the mark of the beast into the dorm room wall. “What if [the other students] don’t like me,” Morrison added.

Reports indicate Morrison sat in his room for nearly an hour plotting a “casual” trip down the hall to “run into” a floormate, stupidly ignoring a chance to “high-key” consult the Catholic Student Center’s exorcist division, whose priests may stand a chance against the primal, otherworldly evil channeled into this dimension through the entity known as Ieriub’hxal. Also on Morrison’s mind was the night’s floor meeting, and who he would sit next to, but not the way the setting sun only strengthened Ieriub’hxal’s power to control the shadows, and sharpened his spiny, goblin teeth.

When asked for comment via Ouija board, Ieriub’hxal reportedly responded with a blood-curling, inhuman scream that shattered glass and made rodents and insects scurry from the walls before dropping dead in droves, which expert demonologists interpreted as meaning approximately, “This Jeremy kid is such a tool, no wonder none of these little punks like him. But fuck me if I’m not the biggest chump of them all for following this shit-stain around for five years now. God I hate myself.”

A Photo of Morrison and Ieriub’hxal from Last Saturday

Which HRC Pantsuit are You?

This quiz reveals why a woman’s image is the MOST IMPORTANT indicator of her value, especially as a politician!

Take the Quiz on page A8!

WUnderground

WUnderground is WashU’s premier [only] satirical newspaper and should be taken about as seriously as a WashU Emergency Alert.

However, the news reported by this paper is completely fictitious, at least to our knowledge. Any resemblance to persons living, ailing or dead is entirely intentional.

Chiefs of Staff

Callan Coghlan
President

Patricia Witt
Editor in Chief

Simon Olson
Editor in Chief

Staff

Aaron Dozzi

Clay Klein

Justin Kroll

Blake Robertson

Kimball Slade

Nate Graham

Adam Kaufman

Jacob Nason

Carter Paterson

Gabby Perez Garcia

Hannah Schanzer

Ted Sorota

Unpaid Interns

Nathan Marak

Henry Weinberg

Zach Moskow

Rohit Kumar

Grace Fellman

Arjun Puri

Brooke Nostrain

Landon Lichtenstein

Guest Contributor

Will Feinberg

If you would like to write, edit, etc. then email us at: wunderground@su.wustl.edu

9 771938 008000

ISSN # 1938-0089

wunderground.wustl.edu

Open Discussion for Democracy and Disagreement Ends in Fatal Stabbing

The University-hosted Open Discussion for Democracy and Disagreement took an unexpected turn September 14th when it suddenly ended in a fatal stabbing. The incident stemmed from a disagreement between freshman Austin Wilson and junior Lauryn Saunders-Brownstein

“Austin was totally out of control,” claimed a witness who refuses to label herself with an oppressive human name. “He had the audacity to mansplain to Lauryn that thought it was inappropriate when she showed up to the meeting naked and on fire.” Sources indicate that Saunders-Brownstein, who self-identifies as a forest fire, then called for Wilson to check his privilege as a cis-life-form-white-male, but he failed to do so. In a beautiful display of fiery might, Saunders-Brownstein then tacked

Wilson to the ground, pulled out a butcher’s knife, and stabbed him for each microaggression that had occurred throughout the discussion.

Paramedics quickly arrived on the scene to tend to those affected by Wilson’s failure to check his privilege. Medical reports indicate that the paramedics were lucky to get there as quickly as they did, and none of Wilson’s victims sustained any permanent emotional damage.

In a University-wide email, Chancellor Wrighton wrote, “It is my sincere hope that this campus never again is faced with the misfortune of having one of our students presented with an opinion with which they disagree. If there is any solace to this tragedy, it’s that a member of our student body had the courage to stand up and make the campus a safer place by stabbing another student 47 times in the chest.”

WUSA Drops Out of School to Pursue Culinary Ambitions

This week sophomore Jessica Abrams has officially declared to her friends and family that she will no longer be attending Wash U. Abrams explained her departure in an emotional facebook post: “Dearest friends and loved ones. It fills me with great excitement to say that I am heading on to bigger and better things. As many of you know this year I became a WUSA for Dardick 4 and in my few weeks as such I have realized my true calling. Baking.”

Despite the rigors and pressure of a professional kitchen, Abrams believes she’s up for the challenge. When our reporters arrived to her dorm room in Elliot, Abrams was hard at work over her Easy Bake oven, putting the finishing touches on stirring around a bowl of Funfetti mix.

“Over the past month, I’ve made about 6 Funfetti cakes for my WUSA floor. The first two were a little undercooked, but I’ve been tinkering around with different types of Sprite, and I think I’ve finally nailed it!” She revealed that Sprite Zero was the key ingredient.

Later during the interview, Abrams told us that leaving Wash U was one of the “hardest decisions of [her] life,” but in the end, she had no choice but to follow her “passion” and “natural gift”. Through her three weeks making cakes from box mix and soda she feels that everyone will love her cooking as much as her constantly stress eating residents do.

Abrams also commented that she knows her residents will be crushed, to which Dardick 4 freshman Lenny Burns responded, “Jessica who? Oh the chick who brings cakes? Yeah I guess she’s cool.”

As of press time, the Student Health Services has noticed an uptick in cases of salmonella poisoning due to undercooked food.

Now known as “WUSA eague” without Jessica.

Point

Pledging Beta is Great!

By: Nick Williams
Beta Theta Pi Pledge

You know, it’s pretty good so far. I’m really excited to have found a community of brothers who already really seem to care about me and my needs as a human and global citizen. I feel like they’re already pushing me to be a better student, person and community member. It’s amazing to have a group of dudes who are so open and honest with their feelings and so willing to support one another.

Counter-Point

Pledging Alpha Delt is Great!

By: Jeff Tannenbaum
Alpha Delta Phi Pledge

You know, it’s pretty good so far. I’m really excited to have found a community of brothers who already really seem to care about me and my needs as a human and global citizen. I feel like they’re already pushing me to be a better student, person and community member. It’s amazing to have a group of dudes who are so open and honest with their feelings and so willing to support one another.

Citing Lack of Diversity, Physics Department Grants Tenure to Freshman Who Withdrew from Class

As the semester kicks into high gear for many Washington University students, freshman Samantha Kline has an exciting new job-- a fully tenured position as a professor of physics. Last Monday morning, while trying to withdraw from her introduction to Physics class, Kline pushed the wrong button and instead became a fully tenured professor in the Physics department.

"I really wasn't getting physics at all, and it wasn't useful for my major, so I thought I'd drop it," Samantha told a reporter from her office in Dunker 104. "Like most other agreements I sign on the internet, I didn't read the terms of dropping the class."

Indeed, plagued by criticism in recent years for its lack of gender diversity, the physics department this year decided to grant full tenureship to the first female who dropped the class.

"Sure it's a weird way to do things, but we're always trying to come up with creative solutions here," said department chair Tom Turner. "She won't actually be teaching any classes until next semester, which gives her more time than many of our other professors to prepare for her class!"

Despite her sudden appointment, Samantha is still determined to make the most of her college experience.

"It's hard to find the time, but I still try to go to WUSA floor hours and hang out with my floor-mates," Samantha said. "Next semester I really want to join Greeklife. I just hope my teaching schedule doesn't get in the way of recruitment!"

Top 10...

Best Walls

10. Great Wall of China
9. Waluigi
8. Wall the Kool Aid Man breaks through
7. Walrus Cup
6. John Wall
5. Your middle school's computer firewall that you and your friends found out how to get through to watch porn during lunch
4. Pink Floyd's "The Wall"
3. Walmart
2. Wall-E
1. The great, beautiful wall that will block off Frat Row and the AC. It's going the greatest, biggest wall you have ever seen. Period.

How do You Deal With Stress?

With the semester underway and the class of 2020 learning the ropes here at WashU, one of the biggest issues on the minds of freshmen is stress. To help out with the transition to the heightened academic and social rigor of college, WUnderground polled current students: How do you deal with stress?

-  Uncle Joe's Peer Counseling
-  Utilizing one or more free counseling appointments at SHS
-  Reminding self of long-term academic and career goals
-  Binge drinking.
-  Decompressing with friends and ensuring time for self-care

What Do You Think?

Whispers is now a giant hole. What do you think?

Jose
Chilean Miner

"Ay dios mio."

Ned Torota
Guy who really likes to fight in holes

"Fuck yeah."

Brett, 23
You met on tinder

"I could fill that hole ;)"

Courtney Mills-Henning
Basic

"Ugh where will I get my light soy mayan mocha now?!"

George Washington
You can call him "Daddy," too

"Expected completion 2018? My sla... I mean employees could finish within a fortnight!"