

Racist Uncle at Thanksgiving Dinner Just Not Getting Same Reactions He Used to Feed Off Of

For Uncle Gilmore Cox, being racist at the Thanksgiving dinner table used to be much more fun. In the aftermath of Donald Trump's election, comments which used to be met by his liberal family members with angry outbursts of disgust are now met only with despondence.

"I told them that Black Lives Matter is in cahoots with ISIS to enslave all white people, but nobody angrily pointed a finger in my face and yelled at me that I was a bad person," Cox said, visibly shaken. "They just lowered their heads and looked like they were about to cry. It was kind of sad."

Uncle Cox, not one to give up easily, used every trick in his racist, sexist book. "I even called Hillary Clinton a slutty bitch," he explained, visibly frustrated, "My teenage niece loves Shillary. Last year she threw her roasted potatoes at me, but this year she just stared ahead and didn't respond."

Cox's plight is not an isolated incident, however, but rather part of a broader post-election phenomenon sweeping the nation: as liberal cronies are becoming more depressed, racism is becoming much less fun.

"I don't even want to say racist things during Thanksgiving anymore if it doesn't enrage people," said Uncle Bobby Crawman, a colleague of Cox's, "Racism is becoming too mainstream. I was racist before it was presidential."

Rethinking plans about being racist at family Christmas party

College Republicans Protest Campus Blood Drive, "Tired of People Just Expecting Free Handouts"

Last Tuesday evening, all six of Washu's fabled "republicans" (whatever that means) could be found angrily waving their signs in protest of the Blood Drive taking place in Bear's Den. Jason Murray, a spokesman for the group, explained their condemnation of the drive. "Today it might seem like just a little bit of blood here and there, but if we start just giving things away to people who didn't work for them, where does that leave us? Where do we draw the line?" Murray later added that he thought the entire premise of the drive sounded "rather marxist."

Some members of the group, however, were slightly more outspoken about the issue. Kathy Moore, holding a sign that read "Free Blood Breeds Free Riders!" complained, "I mean, our bodies are out here working hard while some people are just sitting around in hospitals waiting. I don't see why they aren't expected to make their own blood like everyone else." She went on, telling WUnderground she considered it a "disgrace" that "these people are taking blood from hard-working Americans"

When asked how she felt about the club's protest, freshman donor Rebecca Rice responded "Those guys? Are you serious? One of them tore off my 'I donated' sticker and called me an 'enabler.' What does that even mean?" Another donor, who prefers not to be named, claimed the club accused her of contributing to America's "entitlement culture."

Despite backlash from Student Union, The American Red Cross, and the campus community, College Republicans President Jeremy Jones says the club remains faithfully committed to the issue and is currently collaborating with SLU's College Republicans for a similar protest on the Jesuit university's campus in January.

He's letting the government steal his blood!

Buried WUnderground

Student Eats Out Professor for B+

Page MMXVI

Stalker Magazine Reveals 2017 Women to Watch

Page 2.71828

4th Swamp Friend Salty He Wasn't Included in Sophomore Suite

Page 72.6%

Question of Our Generation: If Someone Doesn't Make Noise When He Sneezes, How Do You Know They Didn't Just Dab?

Page 4:4

Brave Pioneers Set off 3 Seconds Before Little Walking Man Appears

Page 5318008

Canada Geese Flock South, Land At Wash U

With another winter season upon us, Canada geese are flocking to campus once again. In order to escape the harsh Canadian winter, they have migrated to Missouri and can now be found around campus establishing breeding colonies and adjusting to life in this human-altered area.

Last Tuesday, these new Wash U residents attacked Sarah and Rachel from Scarsdale, as they crossed Mudd Field to the Bauer Starbucks. When we interviewed our senior biology writer Ted Harris, he speculated that the attack was sparked by the fact that nesting Canada geese can be aggressive when concentrated in large numbers. However, after thinking about it further, Harris concluded that the geese probably just found people like Sarah and Rachel as annoying as everyone else does.

After the attack, Sarah to Wunderground that the confrontation was a long time coming. According to Sarah, "yeah, like, me and a goose had a face off just this morning. When I saw one outside of Bauer, I kinda, like, freaked out a little. There was no way that feathered freak was going to steal my table!"

WUPD, excited to finally have some action on campus, sent out a warning Tuesday night, urging students not to feed the geese. "It is important for all members of the Washington University community to adopt a no feeding ordinance, so that the geese don't concentrate on campus or grow more aggressive toward people because food is expected. Beware: They will chase you, they will nip you, and they will cause a ruckus."

Tensions have risen between the Canada geese and other members of the Washington University community as well, with the geese specifically targeting community members wearing Canada Goose Inc. brand parkas, which they feel are misrepresenting them and what they stand for. At press time, the geese seem to have made a collective decision to move back to Canada, in the wake of the 2016 presidential results.

Geese attacks finally give WUPD something to do.

WUnderground

WUnderground is WashU's premier [only] satirical newspaper and should be taken about as seriously as an open-book final.

However, the news reported by this paper is completely fictitious, at least to our knowledge. Any resemblance to persons living, ailing or dead is entirely intentional.

Chiefs of Staff

Callan Coghlan
President

Patricia Witt
Editor in Chief

Simon Olson
Editor in Chief

Staff

- Aaron Dozzi
- Josh Moskow
- Justin Kroll
- Blake Robertson
- Kimball Slade
- Nate Graham
- Adam Kaufmann
- Jacob Nason
- Carter Patterson
- Gabby Perez-Garcia
- Ted Sorota

Unpaid Interns

- Nathan Marak
- Henry Weinberg
- Zach Moskow
- Rohit Kumar
- Grace Fellman
- Arjun Puri
- Brooke Nosratian
- Landon Lichtenstein

If you would like to write, edit, tell us we're pretty, etc. then email us at:

wunderground@su.wustl.edu

9 771938 008000

ISSN # 1938-0089

wunderground.wustl.edu

Student Manages to Use Phrase 'Shifting Cultural Landscape' Only Once in Discussion

Last Wednesday, Nate Berkley emerged from his Intro Urban Studies class, feeling a weight lifted off of his shoulders. "I did it. You know it was tricky—I felt it coming on, that urge you know? But then I was like 'c'mon man, you have to diversify your commentary,' and I held back," Nate then continued to liken his restraint to that of a former addict—spiraling into a lengthy, unwarranted explanation of drug criminalization. He continued,

"I'm feeling really good."

Upon asking students for some additional commentary, one classmate had this to say: "Nate? That kid is the most. Last week he told me he read this BuzzFeed article on tampon taxes and just stood up and told all the girls in the room that they 'deserve the right to feminine wellness products'. I don't even think that's what women call them."

We then talked to Nate's professor, Professor Howard Shields, who said that "Nate is a passionate student." It's worth noting that Professor Shield's took a sharp inhale and glanced upwards before settling on 'passionate'.

In a follow-up interview, Wunderground asked Nate about his plans for upcoming lectures. "I'll leave you guys with this: I know social media has gone and appropriated the term 'woke' in an ironic way, but there's truth in that. Just keep your eyes open, you know?"

WUnderground's Year in Review

A lot went down in 2016. Even if you're a busy student who's too busy to keep up on the news, you still deserve to know the highlights (and lowlights) of 2016.

January 3rd

Saudi Arabia severs diplomatic ties with Iran. Remember when that happened? Crazy right.

February 7th

North Korea launches a long-range rocket into space, violating multiple UN treaties and prompting condemnation from around the world.

January 13th

Harry's closes, marking the last night anyone at Wash U has ever had fun going out.

March 8th

Bernie Sanders beats Hillary Clinton in the Michigan primary, becoming the first white man to pull an upset against her in the state.

February 6th

Freshmen Matt Chen gets "super fucking hammered" on Mardi Gras, can't find bus to Souldard, falls asleep in the DUC.

A Rapper's Quest to Become Socially Conscious

Established rapper Yung Turkey has certainly made his mark on the music scene. Over a career spanning decades, he has popularized a genre known as 'Gangsta Rap,' sometimes controversial for its vulgar, demeaning lyrics. But it seems that the rapper is ready to turn over a new leaf. He tells all, right here, in his exclusive interview with WUnderground.

WUnderground: So, Yung Turkey,

pleasure to have you here today. What are your plans for the future? Yung Turkey: Well you know man, I'm just growin' as an artist. Growin', changin', gettin' better each and every day. You know, I'm more socially conscious now than I was a few years ago. WG: Oh yeah, and how's that? Yung Turkey: Well you know that part in my song "A Casual Night" that goes: "All these bitches in the club/ bitch if you know wus' up/ get down with me / suck, fuck, then leave? WG: Of course. Turkey: Well, some women felt the song was a bit rude. So I replaced "bitches" with another word. WG: What did you replace it with? Turkey: Faggots. WG: Oh, Well, that might have not been the best choice. "Faggots" is still an offensive word.

Continued on Page 4

April 18th Sophomore John Dean earns a C- in his chemistry class, but realizes the important life lesson of not letting one failure define his character. You rock John!	May 6th Junior Jessica Holdberg too hungover to meet her friends at Pastaria for brunch.	August 8th A power outage causes hundreds of Delta flights to be either delayed or canceled. Darn it! Did you fly on this day? Send us a letter!	October 9th Washington University hosts the second presidential debate.	November 8th Hillary Clinton defeats Donald Trump in a historic landslide victory. Haha, just kidding, America actually elected the Celebrity Apprentice guy to be the most powerful guy in the world. Whoops!
March 22nd Former Toronto mayor and crack enthusiast Rob Ford dies after losing a battle to cancer. We'll miss you big guy.	June 23rd Brexit!! The United Kingdom votes to leave the European Union.	October 1st Literally nothing important happened in September.	December 28th Something CRAZY is going to happen. Stay tuned.

Point	Counter-Point
"Coolsville sure is safer now that we caught Old Man Jenkins!" By: Mystery Inc. Millennials Boy, I'm so glad we finally caught the Coolsville Steel Clown! Our elaborate trap we set up in the factory actually worked (despite all of Velma's warnings!). Old Man Jenkins fell right into that shaft! Haha what a silly fella, dressing up and all that. I'm sure glad that the people in Coolsville	"I was just trying to help my town." By: Old Man Jenkins Unemployed after factory moved overseas Sixty-seven years. That's how long the steel plant had been operating here in Tulville. So when it was announced last month that our factory was moving overseas, a lot of my neighbors were pretty sad. I started dressing like this in order to cheer them up and hopefully attract more tourism to Coolsville, which has been pretty low since the factory

A Rapper's Quest Continued

Turkey: Huh. Well 'aight how 'bout this one—you know my classic track “Strippas?” I switched up the line, “I threw money at that Latina like she was my maid” so that now it’s “Latinx” instead. Gotta be more gender neutral, fo sho. Bit harder to pronounce now, though. WG: I mean, that line is still based on a racist stereotype. Turkey: Okay, okay hear me out. In my brand new song “Rate Dape,” the line used to be, “This girl at the bar is lookin’ fine as can be/so I put a pill in her drink, and now she’s comin’ home with me.” WG: Oh my god, I didn’t even know about that one. That’s horrible. Turkey: I know, that’s what my boys told me! So I changed it to “dissolvable tablet” ‘cause I know some people have a hard time swallowing pills. Can’t be ostracizing nobody, you feel? WG: Okay you are actually God awful. Turkey: I changed my song “Little White Slut” to “Floozy Caucasian Woman.”

WG: Nope. Uh-huh. The Artist Formerly Known as Yung Turkey: Instead of Yung Turkey, I’m rebranding myself as Retard Chicken. WG: Your name wasn't offensive to begin with!

It's clear that while Retard Chicken may believe his heart is in the right place, he has many steps to go to become truly Woke.™

Pre-Med Requirements

Everyone at WashU is pre-med — it’s common knowledge! However, not everyone realizes the huge commitment they’re making when they decide to follow the pre-med track. We at WUnderground would like to help inform potential pre-meds, because we’re super nice people. Here are the things you need in order to become pre-med:

- Course Requirements one year of timey-wimey science-y gobbledygook, one year of mumbo-jumbo hocus-pocus hogwash, and one year of chemistry.
- To best prepare for future residencies, medical schools like to see that you’re comfortable around reanimated corpses.
- All sexual encounters must come in the form of ‘playing doctor.’
- Be able to remove someone’s kidney before the roofie wears off.
- Know what a rib is
- Have nothing else going on in your life for the next 12-20 years.
- Be able to sell a kidney on the black market above the going rate.
- While not required, it is recommended that you have a close family member with a terminal illness to provide a constant source of inspiration.
- Be able to choke a motherfucker out if they try to rip you off for that kidney.
- Lastly, just remember that no one ever became a successful pre-med without talking about it 24/7

Hannah (above) is only a sophomore, and is already dead inside. Good work Hannah!

Top 10...

Gifts You Don't Want for Christmas

10. Hand-me-down dildo
9. $85 dollar rock from Nordstrom's
8. Gift Card to Comet Ping Pong
7. Your parents to get back together; seriously I'm over it
6. Whatever Jeff (NOT MY DAD) is getting me
5. A handy from Jeff (NOT MY DAD)
4. A subscription to Holden Thorpe's video blog
3. A goat bought in your honor (donate at <http://donate.worldvision.org/goat>)
2. A sweatshirt from your sibling's college
1. Samsung Galaxy S7

What Do You Think?

Amazon is Opening a Cashier-Less Grocery Store

Cashier
Voted for Trump

“Those damn immigrants are stealing our jobs.”

Homeless Person
Occasionally shoplifts

“I can’t wait! Grocery stores with no check-out lines?”

Amazon Headquarters
Located above Amazon sweatshop

“I’m proud to announce our new, innovative business model: selling food at a store.”

Your Aunt Suzy
Has three bunions

“I just don’t understand all these new fangled gizmos, can’t a woman just get her foot cream and radishes at schnucks?!”

George Washington
Shops locally

“Martha's got better produce.”