

WILD Decision Looking Rocky but SPB to announce A.S.A.P.

WashU's social programmingboard announced Wednesday that their decision for Spring WILD is still under heavy debate. After failing to produce a Fall WILD, SPB feels pressure to deliver a high profile artist for this spring's concert. We asked SPB representative Jessica Higgins for a quote, to which she replied "no comment" after pushing past us in Einstein's bakery.

After following her for 6 hours, Jessica, a non chain-smoker, told us "It's a big fuckin' problem. The flow isn't necessarily riding smooth on this one. Young and giant bands just don't really want to play for a bunch of bratty college kids." Ludacris also wasn't going to perform, she added.

While many students are eagerly awaiting a fun day of day drinking and passing out before 2pm, some are less than stoked. Sean, a big sophomore from Portugal, told Wunderground: "Yeah, I'm actually deciding on skipping WILD this year. Probably just gonna get high in my Lamborghini instead."

As of press time, it remains hard to tell whether students will go WILD for the night when April 28th rolls around. Given the highly varied music tastes across students, our editorial board hopes that SPB can pick a Goldie-locks act: someone with broad appeal. However, it's not looking great. With their long history of picking shitty acts, we'll probably get stuck with someone like ASAP Rocky. Have a great WILD everyone!

WUSTL students having "fun"

Jerry Sandusky Named Top Athletic Director Candidate

Reports recently surfaced that former Penn State football coach Jerry Sandusky is one of the top choices in Washington University's search for a new athletic director. The announcement comes in the wake of the departure of Justin X. Carroll, who was indicted on federal child pornography charges in January.

In a press release, Chancellor Wrighton claimed, "We are pleased to announce Mr. Sandusky's candidacy. Jerry's personal history perfectly fits the values Dean Carroll worked tirelessly to instill in the athletic department during his ten-month tenure as its director."

The announcement was not without controversy. Some students are concerned by Sandusky's availability – he was convicted of 45 counts of sexual abuse of young boys in 2012, and is serving a 60-year sentence in a maximum-security prison. Although the university claims Sandusky would be able to work remotely, student-athletes have expressed concerns that Sandusky's inability to attend sporting events could negatively affect school spirit.

Among the other names listed were several Catholic priests, Bill Cosby, and MOPerv. The university hopes to fill the position by the start of the 2017-18 academic year, or just after the next forced retirement of one of its deans, whichever happens first.

Third sex predator to visit WashU in past year

Buried WU Underground

Unusually Warm Weather Causes Campus Jizz Trees to Prematurely Ejaculate

Page G6

Dog Called Cat Offended; Woman Catcalled, Also Offended

Page 10/10

Bannon Unwinds After Press Briefing with Slideshow of Dead Dogs

Page 1,200,345

Awkward! Professor Googles, "How to Get With One of Your Students" With Projector On

Page 5%

White Guy Listens to Common's 2005 Album Be, Now Claims to be Woke

Page 0.0001

Tips for Preparing for Your New Job: Actually Get One

Page 3.8

Sophomore Accepts Internship at Organ Research Institute

It’s that time of the year again. Students across Wash- ington University are franti- cally trying to secure summer internships to boost their future career prospects. For one student, however, the search is over. This past Friday, sophomore Dennis Westman accepted a summer internship at Organ Research Group, a biomedical firm that specializes in organ transplant research. According to Westman, the application and interview process was very straightforward. “The application was just a picture of a human body with the instructions: ‘circle all the organs you still have.’ I studied a lot for the technical interview, but the only question they asked was whether I still had two kidneys and if I’d be okay with some work-related travel. After I said yeah, they offered me a position on the spot!”

The position starts in June, with a mandatory training week in Bangkok, Thailand. According to their company website, the training allows the interns to “shadow” a surgeon while he performs organ extraction surgery. “I’ve never been to Thailand before,” said Westman. “The company only booked a one way ticket, which is kinda weird, but said they’d compensate me for return fare.”

To learn more about the posi- tion, Westman reached out to past interns featured on the company website. As of presstime, he has not heard back from any of them, but did talk to a parent who said she was still waiting for her son to return from the training week.

Westman and his vital organs still intact

WUnderground

WUnderground is WashU’s premier [only] satirical newspaper and should be taken about as seriously as the fake wood grain on a s'well water bottle.

However, the news reported by this paper is completely fictitious, at least to our knowledge. Any resemblance to persons living, ailing or dead is entirely intentional.

Chiefs of Staff

Callan Coghlan
President

Patricia Witt
Editor in Chief

Simon Olson
Editor in Chief

Staff

Aaron Dozzi
Josh Moskow
Blake Robertson
Kimball Slade
Adam Kaufmann
Jacob Nason
Carter Paterson
Gabby Perez-Garcia
Ted Sorota

Unpaid Interns

Nathan Marak
Henry Weinberg
Zach Moskow
Rohit Kumar
Grace Fellman
Arjun Puri
Brooke Nosratian

Foreign Correspondents

Justin Kroll
Nate Graham
Landon Lichtenstein

If you would like to write, edit, tell us your deepest secrets, etc. then email us at:
wunderground@su.wustl.edu

student union
your student government

ISSN # 1938-0089

wunderground.wustl.edu

WUnderground's Spring Wardrobe Guide

Spring is around the corner, but your closet is miserably behind the fashion curve. Don’t worry! WUnderground has you covered. Our top fashion guides curated a list of high fashion items for this season. Dressing to impress has never been easier!

White Tees are always a great spring go-to. This Isabel Marant Etoile piece will go great with all of your other uselessly expensive items in your closet. MSRP: $175

Don’t listen to frat boys: salmon shorts are totally OUT this year. Instead, try opting for these trout shorts from flyfishermen.com! MSRP: $35.95

I don’t know what the FUCK these shits are, but I read in Armour that denim is in these days. MSRP: $45.99

A “Make America Great Again” hat but on fire. Show your friends and colleagues how bright and hot your love burns for the Big D. MSRP: $20.00

How to Get Buff Without Actually Fucking Working Out

Spring Break is right around the corner, and we at WUnderground know that many of you guys promised yourselves that over the long winter, you'd chisel out that monster body you've always wanted. We also know that probably hasn't happened. But fear not! Our top cryptologists have deciphered the message hidden within the colorful (ugly as hell) mural in Sumers to bring you these 4 foolproof steps to GET BUFF with minimal (no) physical effort.

1. Sun's Out, Guns Out

This phrase is now your Bible, your Bhagavad Gita, your Quran, and also probably your PornHub username. But remember, just because it's not sunny outside doesn't mean that you shouldn't don a bro-tank. According to science, the sun is always out. It doesn't just fucking disappear. Therefore, your guns should never disappear either. And we know this pretty much goes without saying, but if you constantly wear tank tops, you have to be buff, no matter how scrawny your arms actually are.

2. Protein, protein, protein!

Buy all the supplements you can! Your entire diet should consist of powder, whether it be whey, iocane, or pixy stix. Remember: If you can't snort it, abort it.

3. Change the topic of any conversation to lifting.

Now, let's be straight with each other. We both know you haven't lifted weights since that one time in 8th grade when your dad showed you how to do bicep curls because "your football coaches are gonna love those arms, son." We also both know that your dad now hates you for not becoming the sports star he had envisioned when he thrust his unfulfilled athletic dreams onto you at birth. But guess what? No one needs to know any of this. Any time you enter a conversation, just make sure everyone knows how sore your arms are from just grinding out a monster sesh at the gym. And just to make sure they believe you, always carry around one of those shaker cup things filled with the protein powder you bought earlier so that everyone knows how serious your gym obsession is.

4. Comebacks

If anyone ever says that you don't look like you workout, just call them fat. They become insecure, and you gain the upper hand. Works every time.

Remeber Neville from the Harry Potter movies? This is him now.

With these four simple steps, you'll be one step closer to becoming every girl's one-night fantasy and many steps closer to becoming that guy dancing with his shirt off in the middle of the Alpha Delt basement that everyone hates. A total win-win.

Is Your Rommmate Rich?!

Dear Callan,

So my roommate and I have never been particularly close, but after the SES report about WashU came out, I'm starting to think she might be a 1%-er. But I'm not sure how to tell? Are there signs I should be looking for?

—Rich Roomie Quan

Dear RRQ,

A classic problem! Sometimes it's hard to tell when a classmate is a 1%-er, but there are some telltale signs. Look at what they wear... Does she wear a Canada Goose jacket? Did she buy jeans with holes already in them? Does he own shoes? These are all classic signs of a wealthy roommate. How do they live? Does he have Wydown Water? Did she bring her own chandelier? Is she living in V-East next year? Does she leave cash and gold bars lying around? Does he have consistent access to

Continued on page 4

*The first tell-tale sign

Point

Food at Ibby's is exquisite

By: Chef Jean Bissou
Studied at Missouri Culinary Arts for 7 months in a row

I work day in and day out to craft exquisite meals for the WashU student and faculty body. Our dining quality is of the utmost importance; we regularly shift the menu to utilize seasonal foods and work with local farmers for fresh dairy products. I'm incredibly proud to work here and I treat my staff extremely well. I'm simply blessed by god to have such a talent with food, Ibby's is a labor of love for me.

Counter-Point

Food at Ibby's is trash

By: Katie Wilson
Junior in Olin Business School, definitely not on a diet

Literally fuck Ibby's. My to-go brussel sprouts were cold last night, I waited probably 20 minutes for them. Last tuesday I went with Jessica and they even carded her when she asked for two carafes of Sangria. Fuuuuck that i'm not tryna get my second ID taken. The only reliable thing about Ibby's is their bananas foster, and I don't know if I even like that anymore. Like, I've had it way too many times now. All I can say is byeeeee.

Mike Pence Visits Historic St. Louis Cemetery to Conceal Remaining Evidence

In an unexpected display of social activism, Vice President Mike Pence visited the vandalized Chesel Shel Emeth Cemetery in University City late Monday afternoon, in what many praised as an effort to contribute to the site's rehabilitation. Visitors to the historic landmark thanked Mr. Pence for his visit, to which Pence insistently responded, "I didn't do it."

On many occasions during his stay, the Vice-President denounced the anti-Semitic crime, which he "definitely had not participated in." "You see destruction of this sort, bad people with bad intentions, and it's just terrible," said Pence, removing a White House key card from the debris without breaking eye contact.

Sources say Pence spent the majority of his afternoon walking the grounds, pausing in sudden fits of emotion which would bring him to his knees. "It was really something," said Rabbi Paul Ibramowitz. "There was a bunch of times the guy would fall to the ground and he'd start clawing at it, like he was digging for something. An explanation, I guess."

The Vice-President also spent time helping to scrub graffiti decals from the faces of some of the headstones, including swastikas and a poorly drafted "Pence Wuz Here." The vice-president shook his head and chuckled at the discovery. "It's disheartening to see people who would try and blame others for hateful stuff like this," said Pence, discreetly pocketing an empty paint dispenser.

The Vice-President emphasized the need to bring those responsible for the damages to justice. When asked if he believed Mr. Trump's incendiary rhetoric might have contributed to the attack, Mr. Pence raised the possibility that the cemetery owners "had vandalized their own cemetery," and reiterated that these behaviors were not uncommon of radical Islam.

Is Your Rommmate Rich?! Continued...

clean water? Does he have a comforter instead of a cardboard box and trash bag?

What do they eat? This is one of the most telltale signs! Does she snack on unshelled pistachios and drink Fiji water? Does he go to Pastaria weekly? At Ibbby's does he get steak? Does she not dig through the compost for chicken bones to make a weekly stew? How many times has he even had stone soup!?

Do they talk about their family? Does her dad manage a hedge fund? Did both her parents to to Princeton? Do all 4 of her grandparents not sleep in the same bed? Has he loss fewer than two siblings to the black death?

RRQ, if you answered yes to any of these questions, your roomie is probably a 1%-er!

*A better sign than the first sign

*Another sign

Top 10...

Spring Favorites

10. Global Warming

9. Shamrock Shakes

8. Cherry Blossom Instagram Pictures

7. Seeing my toenails again

6. Tornados

5. Having existential crises because you're still in school

4. Swimsuit Shopping

3. Unreasonable amounts of pollen

2. Finding stretch marks on your winter bod

1. WILD

What Do You Think?

Your suitemates are going to Cabo and didn't tell you. What Do You Think?

You

Sometimes doesn't take out the trash

"Maybe I can catch up on studying?"

Becky

Has always had a thing against you

"Yeah, sorry about that... We just don't like you that much."

Your Rabbi

Has a different definition of "fun"

"It's not too late to sign of up for Spring Break Birthright!"

Your Parents

More fun than you

"Oh, we thought you had plans. Your father and I are going to Cabo and it's too late to buy another ticket."

George Washington

Really, really tan

"Jefferson and Madison did the EXACT same shit to me. Fuck them, Cabo isn't even that fun anyway."